THE FALL-DOHENY CONSPIRACY TRIAL

PRODUCES A SENSATION ADMIRAL REFUSES TO TESTIFY

On Orders of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur—His Testimony Would Have Made Public the Secret Strategic Importance of the Pearl Harbor Fortifications in Hawaii.

The defense Friday drew Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy into the Fall-Doheny criminal conspiracy trial accusing the secretary in open court of seeking to restrict the testimony of a retired naval officer and produced what they said was an official order to prove it.

Whether or not the document is to go before the jury was still undecided when court was adjourned Friday night, but Mr. Wilbur will be put on the witness stand Monday. He declined to forecast what his testimony would be.

Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for the defense, presented the document during examination of Rear Admiral J. K. Robison, retired, former chief of the bureau of engineering, when the witness refused to answer questions concerning the strategic importance of the Pearl Harbor (Hawaii) naval base.

Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, and Edward L. Doheny, lessee of the Elks Hill reserve, are charged with criminal conspiracy to defraud the government in the negotiations which led to the lease and the award to Doheny's company of an oil storage contract at Pearl Harbor.

Admiral Robison, one of the principal defense witnesses, was called for questioning as to the part the navy took in the negotiations. As special representative of Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy at the time, he said he was charged with all negotiations involving the navy's interest and in that capacity was conversant with virtually every step in the conversations which culminated in the leases and contracts awarded to Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company.

When Hogan questioned Robison as to the official status of the Pearl Harbor base in the war plans division of the navy department, the witness refused to answer.

"Have you received any order from the navy department?" Hogan asked. "Yes."

"Produce it." Robison refused, but finally handed a paper to Justice Hoehling, presiding. "I see no need of publishing that," the court said.

The matter then was taken under advisement, following government objection to Hogan's tender of the document in evidence.

The Wilbur flurry was the climax of a laborious day which put before the jury evidence that both sides averred supported their case.

The cross examination of Dr. H. Foster Bain, former director of the Bureau of Mines, was directed by the prosecution to an effort to establish its contention that Fall personally supervised the details of the Elks Hills and Pearl Harbor negotiations.

The direct examination of Admiral Robison and three other defense witnesses was viewed by the defense as having supported their contention that the navy department's close watch of the negotiations made collusion between Fall and Doheny impossible.

Admiral Robison said he was acquainted with every detail of the negotiations and that the interior department subordinates did nothing without consulting him. He, in turn, presented all important questions to Secretary Denby for his personal consideration and approval.

Denby approved Robison's decision to assent to the interior department's proposal to open the Elks Hills reserve to additional leasing, the witness said. He also personally approved the Pearl Harbor contract and ordered Robison to proceed with the navy's part in its immediate execution.

A detailed map of Pearl Harbor and contiguous territory was spread before the jury in the examination of Rear Admiral Gregory, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, who was called for examination as to the importance of the $100,000,000 naval base to the Pacific fleet. He identified departmental memoranda which culminated in formal acquiescence by Secretary Denby to the interior department's plans for handling naval oil.

Admiral Robison testified later he understood the plans had originated not with Fall, but in the offices of petroleum technologists of the bureau of mines.

RINGLING, VETERAN

CIRCUS MAN, IS DEAD

Charles Ringling, circus man financier and railroad builder, died at his home at Sarasota, Florida, at 7 o'clock Friday night after an illness of several weeks. His death was unexpected as it had been believed by attending physicians as late as Friday that he was recovering from an attack of heart trouble.

Mr. Ringling was one of the famous Ringling brothers who years ago organized a wagon show and from this developed the largest circus organization in the world, making their names household words.

READY FOR DEBUT

Miss Elizabeth Clem, daughter of Maj. Gen. John L. Clem, retired, will make her debut into Washington society this winter. General Clem, prominent in Grand Army of the Republic circles, is famous as "the drummer boy of Chickamauga."

AGED NEGRO NOT GUILTY

Athens—Joe Wood, aged negro, was found not guilty of the murder of Edgar Mariner, dry raider, by a jury Friday afternoon. The jury returned its verdict shortly after 2 o'clock after deliberating for nearly four hours. Wood claimed that he shot the enforcement officer when the raiders came to his shanty late at night and he mistook them for highwaymen.

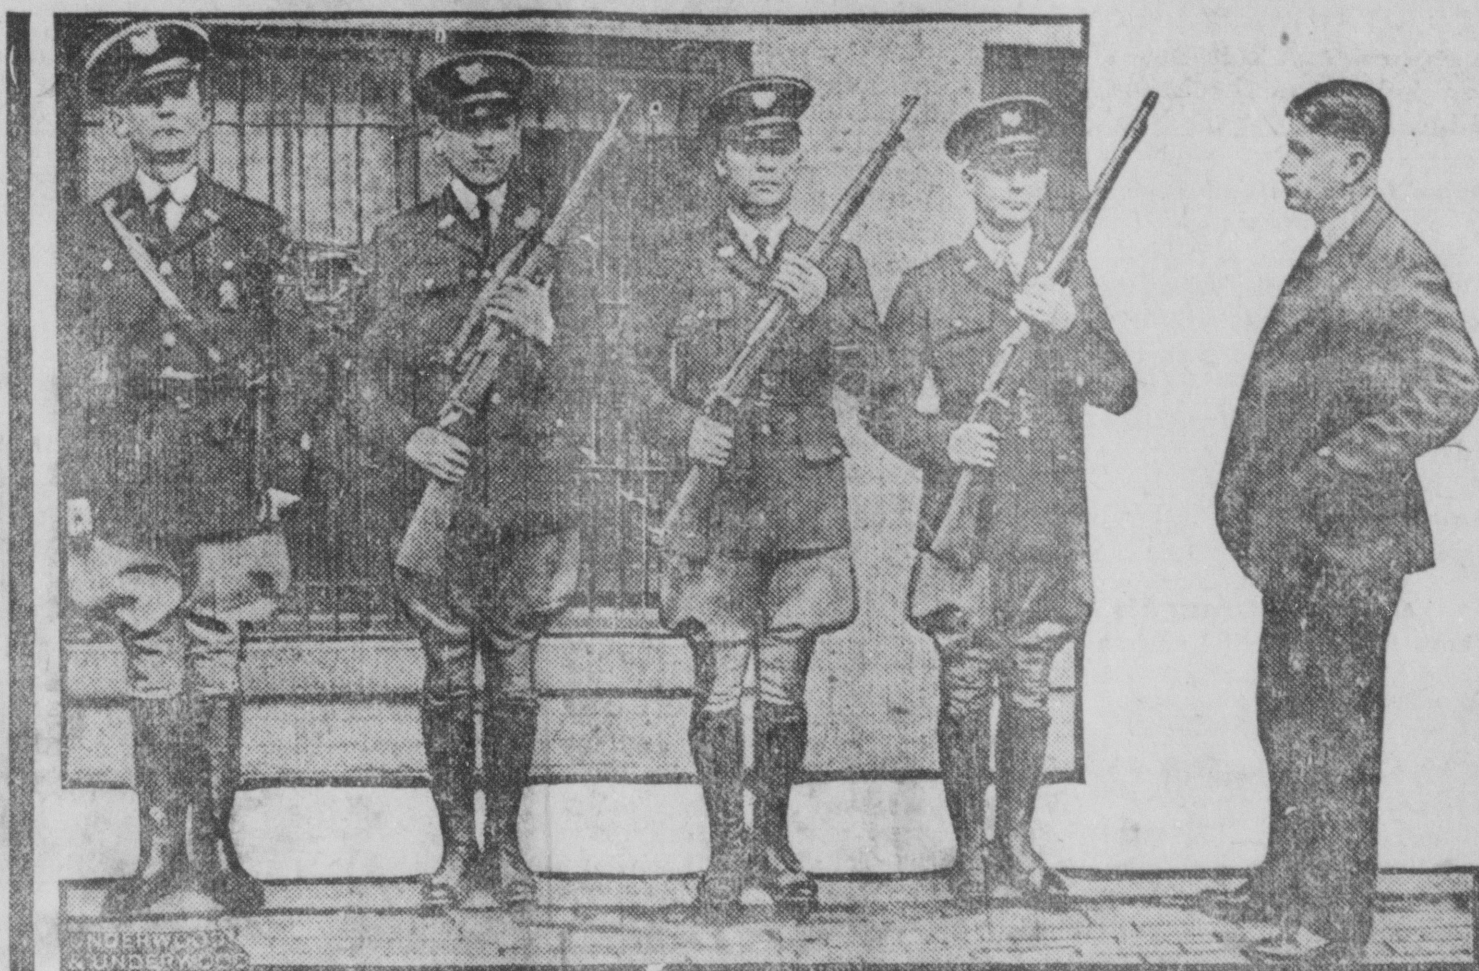

FIRE FRIDAY NIGHT.

The fire department was called to the sheriff's residence Friday evening at 10:30 o'clock. An awning on the west side of the building caught fire and was consumed.

New Jersey Dry Agents Put in Uniform

Dry agents operating in the state of New Jersey will hereafter wear uniforms when going out to raid a "joint," at least one member of the raiding party being so dressed, so that the violators of the law will know that a real raid is being staged and that they are not encountering hijackers. Photograph shows four agents wearing their new uniforms, being inspected by Col. Ira L. Reeves.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires
By Correspondents of the United States Press Association

Columbus — C. B. Beatty, East Liverpool, pottery jobber and gubernatorial aspirant, twice in the last three years refused to be discouraged merely because the electors of Ohio have twice failed to nominate here. At each primary election, Beatty has been badly defeated, receiving only 8797 votes at the last primary.

Despite this Beatty has already telegraphed Secretary of State Brown asking the latter to mail him blanks so that he can file as a candidate in 1928.

Dayton — After nine hours of deliberation a jury returned a verdict finding Albert L. Hill, 48, guilty of murder in the first degree, but recommended mercy, which is equivalent to a life sentence in the penitentiary at Columbus.

Cardington — Robert A. Beatty, a member of the state constitutional convention in 1912, died at his home here. He had been ill for several weeks.

Columbus — Lieutenant Colonel L. Harry Davis, attorney, Pomeroy, has been selected as first assistant attorney general by Edward C. Turner, attorney general-elect. Davis will take office January 10. He was graduated from the Ohio State university college in law in 1914, and was admitted to the bar the same year.

Columbus — An investigation of the recent break of the Ohio and United States crop reporting service would be welcomed, state director of agriculture Truax told Myers Y. Cooper in a letter. This statement was an answer to Cooper's assertion that an investigation of the next should be made.

Columbus — "Miners should not be permitted to strike" and when the Jacksonville agreement expires operation should be on an open shop basis or the miners accept a wage reduction, the report of the coal committee of the Ohio chamber of commerce announced here today said.

King George has recently been seen in public with his trousers creased down the front instead of down the side, the style he previously followed. The question is, does that mean war between England and France?

AUTOMOBILE GETS FARMER FRESH MEATS

Retail Dealers Will Probably Butcher Less and Less in the Next Few Years.

Automobiles have increased the farmer's demand for fresh meats from the local retail butcher, according to George F. Henning, of the department of rural economics at the Ohio State university, who has just completed a study of the channels through which livestock from Ohio farms reaches the markets.

Local demands on round steak in a few instances caused the price to go up until it equaled the more choice cuts, porterhouse and sirloin. This, it is thought, may in part be due to the consumer's aversion to bone in his meat.

Local retailers that kill all their own meat are also becoming fewer. Many times communities that form the local trade will demand more of the hind quarters than the forequarters. This leaves the butcher who kills his own meat with a surplus of other cuts. Packers will wholesale the desired or most saleable parts as they are needed. Many of them are also offering good service by truck to the retailer's store.

Retailers are finding difficulty in securing a uniform grade of animals in their local communities when they want them. By buying from packers the butcher is able to get the exact grade of meat his trade desires. It seems to be the opinion of many local butchers, Mr. Henning says, that the butcher shop will kill less of its own meat in the next few years.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS

The Chesapeake & Hocking railroad has a number of rails laid north from the Lindsey farm on its right-of-way. A water line has been laid from the canning company's supply tank to the Bates & Rodgers camp established in the Longbaugh shop building near the power house and is now about ready for occupancy.

About 80 mules and horses arrived at the N. & W., stock yards in Ashville on Wednesday afternoon. These animals are the property of Ferguson & Edmonson and were taken to the camp at Gray north of Ashville, Thanksgiving day. The stock is of high grade and in splendid condition for service.—Ashville News.

GETS PERKINS MEDAL

Dr. John E. Teeple, New York city chemist, has been awarded the Perkins medal for 1927 for his achievements in chemistry, particularly the development of an American potash industry at Searles Lake, Calif. He is secretary of the American Chemical society, a native of Illinois, and a graduate of Valparaiso college and Cornell university.

LADIES' SOCIETY.

The last meeting in 1926, of the Ladies' society of Trinity Lutheran congregation, was held Wednesday afternoon in the social rooms of the church, 86 members and a number of visitors were present and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. The missionary paper for the month was read by Mrs. W. E. Crist, subject; "Our Home Mission Union." After transaction of business, a social hour followed, during which Mrs. Frank Kline Jr., sang the beautiful solo; "The Silent Voice." The December committee served a delicious lunch, pressed chicken, mashed potatoes with gravy and cranberries, spiced pears, coffee and buttered rolls.

MURDER IS SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY

Mystery surrounds the identity of a man who apparently had been slugged and tossed onto a coal pile in the basement of the Wells Auto Service company 555 East Main street, Columbus.

The man was found lying on the coal pile, a wound in his head, at 5 o'clock Wednesday by B. F. Howell, 523 East Cherry street, night watchman, when he went to the basement to fire the furnace. He was in a semi-conscious condition and was revived by Mr. Howell.

The stanger, seemingly, was unaware of his identity, or did not care to divulge it, as he left the basement in a short time after returning to consciousness, made his way to the street and disappeared before Mr. Howell could question him further.

Theory is that the man had been slugged, his pockets turned out and then shoved thru the coal hole from the street.

An Ohio editor notifies his readers that there is no use sending him anonymous letters, as he never opens them.

CHEAP SWINDLER, LOOK OUT FOR HIM

Zanesville, Dec. 2.—Representing himself as an agent for the Columbus branch of the Cusack Outdoor Advertising Co., a man giving his name as D. H. Gumeroff entered into a verbal agreement with Clifford Dunn, contracting carpenter of the Dresden road, for the immediate construction of 26 large billboards along the west pike. To make the transaction appear bona fide, Gumeroff deposited a check for $825 with a local bank to cover the cost of the material ordered and Dunn's commission.

Saying he was called to Columbus on business, "Gumeroff" had Dunn indorse a check for $280 and identify him at the local bank where the check was cashed. When "Gumeroff" failed to return or communicate with Dunn, an investigation revealed that the Cusack company had no representatives in this vicinity, also the check for $825 was returned from the Columbus bank upon which it was drawn, marked "no funds."

"Gumeroff" is said to have been accompanied by a boy about 14 years of age.

Always Pays to Try Phosphate on Corn

Results Secured From Tests Made in Minnesota.

Dr. F. J. Alway, chief of the soils division, university of Minnesota, recently reported the results from a series of trials of phosphate on corn on 55 farms in Jackson county. As the corn was husked and weighed up in September, it was found, he says, that on about one-third of the fields there was no distinct effect. On another third there was an increase of 5 to 10 per cent, and on the remaining third an increase of 10 to 20 per cent. When the corn had been thoroughly dried there was far more shrinkage with the unfertilized than with the fertilized corn in nearly all cases, due to the fact that the fertilized corn was more mature.

About one-third of the fields gave no appreciable gain of dry-shelled corn; another third showed an increase of 10 to 25 per cent, and the remaining third of 25 to 60 per cent.

Doctor Alway concludes that in Jackson county, with such a season as the one in 1925, there is chance of a profitable use of phosphate on corn land, and he would encourage farmers in all southwestern counties of Minnesota to try phosphate on a small scale on their corn. Applications may well consist, he says, of 50 pounds per acre of treble superphosphate, about 100 pounds of 20 per cent acid phosphate, or 125 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate.

Proper Storage of Ice for Summer Very Simple

It isn't so much what kind of building the farmer stores his ice in, as how he packs it.

Storage of ice for summer use is simpler than generally believed. A properly constructed ice house is desirable, but any building affording protection from wind and rain may be used.

Proper packing is more important than the design of the house. The two important factors are the packing material and the ice block.

"Sawdust is a satisfactory packing material. It is easily obtainable everywhere. Frame walls of single thickness require 18 inches of sawdust around the sides, top, and bottom of the ice block. Twelve to 14 inches of sawdust will do for houses having double walls with a dead air space. Proper drainage must be provided beneath the ice block."

Keep the ice cakes close together on edge, if you want the ice to keep well.

Smooth the surface of each tier of cakes with adz or ax. Force the ice chips between any cracks that may remain. Place the next tier of cakes directly on the first, and so on until the house has been filled. The entire ice block will tend to freeze together as one huge cake.

Some Fertilizers Mixed Without Curing at Home

The statement often heard, "That fertilizer must be cured" is only a part truth and likely to be misleading, says A. W. Blair, professor of soil chemistry at the New Jersey experiment station.

When rock phosphate or a mixture of rock phosphate and low-grade organic material is treated with sulphuric acid in the manufacture of acid phosphate, it is necessary for the resulting material to go through a process of curing. In this curing, time must be allowed for completing the chemical reaction, both for the escape of noxious gases and for the mass to dry so that it may be properly pulverized. But once the acid phosphate is properly prepared it becomes a commercial product which is easily handled and may be mixed with other fertilizer materials in the making of complete fertilizers. These mixed fertilizers may be used immediately without any further curing or processing.

For example: A mixture may be made up of acid phosphate, nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia, tankage and muriate of potash, and used the day it is mixed and give just as good results as it would if allowed to stand two months.

FARM NOTES

Plan to paint the farm buildings during the slack season.

A fertile soil is evidence of a fertile brain in the farmer's head.

Before planning to increase production, make sure the product can be sold.

Waste oil from the tractor, car, or truck engine crank case works fine in a hog oiler.

In every farming community there ought to be a rogue's gallery of farmers who rob their soils.

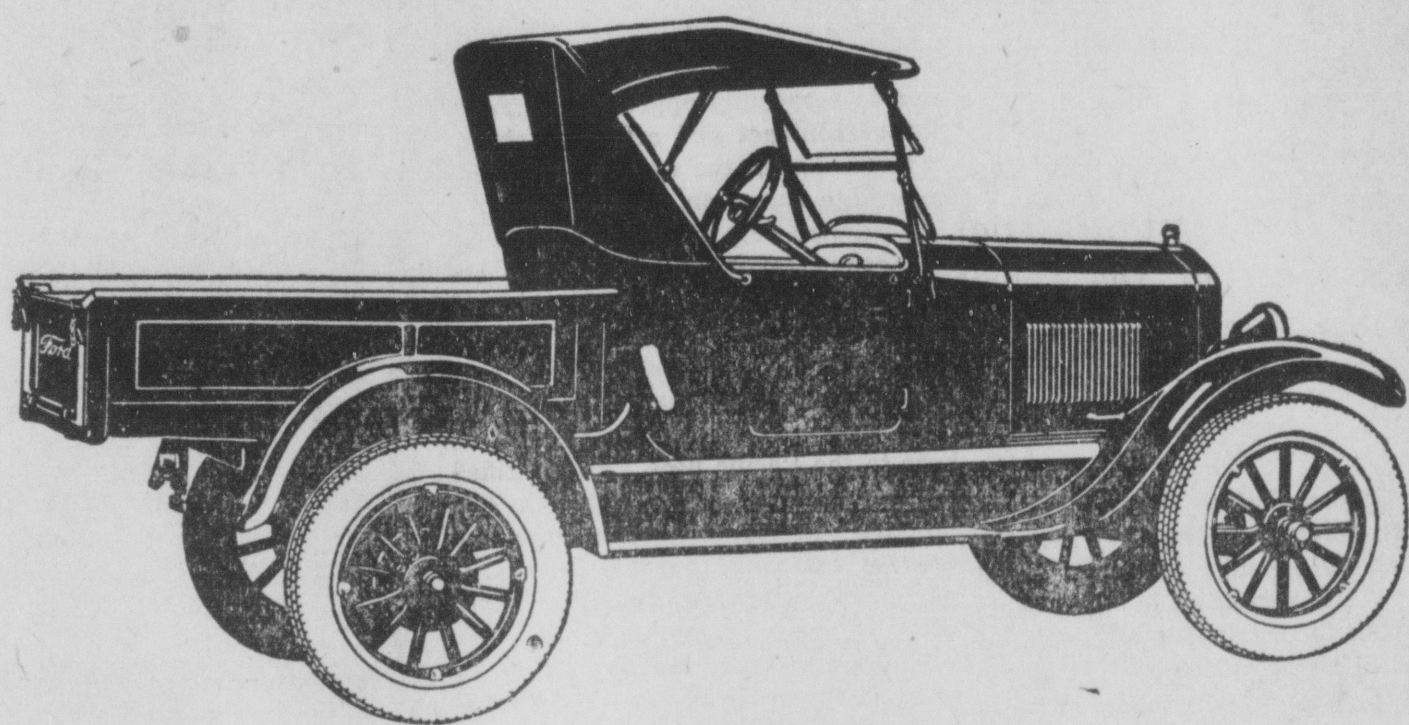

Clip the stubble fields this fall and see how much better clover and grass you will have next year.

The farmer's No Man's Land is out where the wet begins. Tile drains make pretty good shock troops.

Dry seeds do not heat, mold or freeze easily. The life of seed depends more on moisture than anything else in farm storage.

Crepe Street Frocks

Are Partial to Plaits

While fashion demands greater softness and fullness in spring frocks, it continues to approve the slim silhouette. Modistes, by means of crepe and plaits, continue to follow fashion without destroying the appearance of slenderness—they dissemble fullness with flat plaits.

Two-Piece Jumper Frock

Is in Fashion Limelight

In a single collection of new models there were included no less than 20 different versions of the two-piece jumper frock. Some were fashioned of the new soft woolsens in kasha weaves. Others were of knitted fabrics. A third type emphasized the vogue of rough textured silks such as shantung and rajah, while for evening one found these charmingly youthful little frocks developed in crepes and chiffons.

Standing out with significant definiteness in any array of new fashions are the frocks of the two-piece type made entirely by hand and with characteristic French touches in the cunning details of hand work in the form of fine hemstitching, tucking or delicate embroidery.

In Paris there is one particular house noted for the smartness of its little silk sport frocks. These are tailored with all the care and precision that goes into the making of more formal costumes, and they are delightful examples of simple fashions in their most perfect guise.

Fashions That Persist

to Hold Milady's Favor

From the fashion point of view, this season holds much of interest. Spring modes are introduced and tried out and from the outstanding successes of the previous season one or two remain. With slight modification and changes they continue on their way.

A mode that shows no sign of becoming passe is the dinner and dance frock of delicate transparent fabrics. These in various new interpretations are shown in increasing numbers each week. From the resorts of the South where fashions for the present and future are established comes word that in almost any assemblage of smart women the sheer dance frock in pastel shades outnumbers those of any other fabric.

One of the colors that promises to continue its present vogue throughout the late spring and summer is a soft tone of pink almost faded in hue.

It is intensely becoming to both young and old and has a certain elusive charm difficult to put into words.

Sailor Collar Appears

With or Without Shield

The sailor collar appears in regulation form, sometimes with and sometimes without a shield. Its tie varies from the wide to the narrow and may be bowed or knotted. In the back it reaches from shoulder to shoulder and squares itself in the old familiar way. In the jumper dress the sailor collar creates a neck finish refreshingly different. It lacks the convertible feature, of course, that so many jumper necks possess. A contrasting border and tie in solid color or print gives emphasis to the sailor shape and dimensions. This collar is equally applicable to the one-piece frock of sport or semi-sport type.

Jumper to Jumper

When a fashionable woman today changes her dress she just goes from jumper to jumper. So universal has the mode for jumpers become that they are developed in jersey for sports, in silk, velvet or mousseline for afternoon wear and in lace, embroidery or lame for evening. The evening jumpers considered the smartest at the moment are those covered with sequins.

Boleros Advanced

The bolero jacket has been promoted from the daytime frock to evening wear. The short, round little jackets now are made in lace or beaded or spangled silk for wear over evening dresses. Usually they are of a shade contrasting with the frocks, of which the bodies are straight and close fitting.

Chiffon Lisle Stockings

Chiffon lisle stockings are replacing heavier woolen ones for sports wear. It is said that they are quite warm enough and that they are more attractive on the leg than heavier woolens. Soft, pastel shades are those generally chosen.

Cops to Carry Cameras

Cincinnati policemen will be equipped with cameras in addition to night sticks. It is thought that cameras will provide a useful adjunct in accident cases, as the officer will be able to take a picture of the actual accident and many disputes by witnesses will be avoided.

Highest Flight of Birds
The highest flight of birds is estimated to be 25,000 feet. This altitude is attained by the large type of bird, the smaller ones flying 23,000 feet. It has been said, however, that geese have been known to fly the Himalayas at 35,000 feet.

SHOULD MEN REMOVE HATS IN ELEVATOR
Real Estate Business Women Adopt Report For Uniform Rule of Conduct.

If there are still old fogies among men who resent the entrance of women into the sacred precincts of male dominance, their sense of effort should be somewhat mollified by a recent report of business women. Ladies in shops and offices are not always emphasizing their ladylikeness; sometimes they show almost masculine common sense.

At a recent convention of building owners and managers a committee of women in the real estate business turned in a report on certain phases of the management of commercial buildings. Included was a recommendation "that members of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers strive to educate the elevator passengers in commercial buildings to refrain from removing their hats in the presence of ladies, in order that a uniform rule of etiquette may prevail."

Acceptance of such a rule would simplify life for the man who wants to be courteous and avoid being absurd. It is often a question, entirely aside from the risk of catching cold, whether it is better in a crowded elevator to crush a hat and the ribs of a few passengers or to be crushed under the scornful gaze of homeward-bound typists.

The committee's recommendation to educate the passengers in the right idea. Sporadic obedience to the rule is not enough. An intensive campaign with a "Keep-Hat-On" week is now in order.—New York Times.

AMUSEMENTS

Picture goers who visit the Met theater next Monday are assured of a royal good time. Douglas MacLean, acknowledged king of comedy, will be there with his latest mirthquake, "Hold That Lion," supported, as the title promisingly suggests by several kings of the jungle.

Besides the smiling funster and his unsociable pets, the picture reveals a number of personalities who share in the general fun and excitement. Constance Howard, a blonde and petite newcomer, makes an impressive screen debut as MacLean's leading lady. Watler Hiers, who is just as funny as he is fat and vice versa, contributes a goodly quota of laughs on his own account. Cyril Chadwick, Wade Boteler and George Pearce—all tried and true players—ably second the active and irrepressible star.

As in "That's My Baby" his previous comedy success MacLean had the directorial help of William Beaudine and the scenario assistance of Joseph Franklin Poland. The story was especially written for him by Rosalie Mulhall.

In "Hold That Lion" MacLean starts out to demonstrate that the way of a man to the heart of a maid is sometimes via the big game hunting route. He ends up by proving that love can laugh at lions as well as at locksmiths. The story has its beginning in New York, where the romantic Douglas first sets eyes on the beautiful blonde, who becomes the unconscious cause of all his trials and tribulations.

When the girl leaves on a round-the-world trip with her father, MacLean impulsively follows. The chase leads to Cherbourg, then to Gibraltar next to Naples and finally to East Africa. By that time, Hiers, who has accompanied him, is minus his breath and MacLean is minus his trousers. His antics as a trouserless Romeo furnish some of the most uproarious moments in the picture.

But it is in the lion hunting scenes that the film reaches the heights of hilarity. As a big game hunter, MacLean proves that he is in a class by himself. His method of capturing a lion would make even a wooden Indian roar with laughter.

Original Glee Club
The glee club, which originated in some meetings at the house of Mr. Robert Smith in St. Paul's churchyard (England), commenced in 1783, at which motets, madrigals, glees, canons and catches were sung after dinner. The meetings were subsequently held at Doctor Beevers' and other houses until, in 1787, it was resolved to establish a society to be called the Glee club, the first public meeting of which took place at the Newcastle coffee house on Saturday, December 22, 1787.

Extra Touches to Enhance New Suit
Hosiery, Sleeve Flouncings, Add to Attractiveness of Chic Duds.

New models in hosiery are coming along swiftly, some bizarre in the extreme, some sensational. The light shades in sheer stockings, nude and delicately tinted flesh are still worn with all sorts of frocks, but there are many later styles. There are several shades of gray, from gun metal to pearl, sauterne, rose-beige, chartreuse and parchment.

It is considered smart to wear stockings to match the gown, and lovely tints in some of the latest styles are being worn at the southern resorts, and we should see them with light frocks at the summer watering places. The most extravagant modes in stockings for elaborate toilets are affected by women who go in for that type of thing. Stockings that are almost entirely of lace, stockings with embroidery that almost covers the front from toe to garter and hand-painted stockings, sheer as cobwebs, are now quite usual. The very latest thing is the beaded or pailletted stocking, as ornate and colorful as the evening gown which it is designed to match. These appear from time to time but it is unlikely that the fashion will become general.

A clever idea which will be welcome is illustrated in the sleeve-flouncings shown among the dress trimmings for spring. They are widths of thin white material left loose at one selvage and at the other gathered into a band of lace or embroidery. The plain edge is to be sewed into the under side of sleeves of a gown, the band forming a cuff or wristband, a greatly simplified manner of making the undersleeves that are now necessary with the late models having the wide, straight sleeve.

Apropos the new lingerie, the latest styles in boudoir shoes are fascinating. The mule, which every smart woman wears, is made in innumerable models, some of them extravagantly ornate. Some from Paris are of gilt and silver kid decorated with a hand-painted all-over design of Dresden flowers. Some are made of satin elaborately embroidered, others of bits of rich brocades and of the bright metal stuffs. Ornaments of jade, both white and green, antique buckles in gold or silver, jewels, real or synthetic, and many intriguing devices done with flowers, bows and feathers.

Fur Adorns Collars in New Spring Coats

The "splendor dear to women" finds expression this spring on smart new coats, where summer furs often provide the collars, or are used in narrow bands as edgings. Nothing is more becoming than this touch of fur, hence its popularity all the year round.

French Women Are Using Two Powders in Make-Up
One of the modes that promises to be soon the furor of America is the new use of powder, for one secret comes in advance—the French are using two powders. Skillfully blended, of course, and applied with consummate art. French women keep their beauty methods strictly entre nous and nowhere in Paris does one see the promiscuous using of make-up that we see at home. The chic Parisienne never leaves her boudoir without a final glance into the mirror; a final pointing up of brows and lashes with a tiny brush so that clinging particles of powder may be removed. Never do you see the smart French woman making up in public!

Gray in Favor
Gray may sound sad, but it is decidedly "good" just now for the early spring costumes. A particularly handsome gown was fashioned of an orchid gray, profusely trimmed with crystals. It was a straightline model terminating with a box-plaited flounce, and each plait was adorned with beads. Another attractive gray gown was of satin veiled with pearl gray georgette.

Bouffant Frocks
Bouffant frocks in varied combinations of pastel colors are extremely smart and admirably adapted to the needs of the younger girl. A particularly pretty model is of pale pink combined with violet taffeta and trimmed with wheels of silver embroidery.

DECEASED ELKS TO BE HONORED BY LOCAL LODGE
Sunday Afternoon at Two O'clock in Their Rooms on Court Street.

A memorial service will be held by the local lodge of Elks at their lodge room Sunday afternoon. The program starts promptly at 2 o'clock.

Attorney James M. Hengst, of Columbus, will make the memorial address; Miss Anna Schleyer will play "Nearer, My God, to Thee" as an introductory march.

Ritualistic services will follow with Walker Baughman presiding as exalted ruler of the lodge.

Mrs. Frank Kline Jr., will sing two solos; "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" and "Ave Maria." The program will close with the reading of the names of absent members and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

"Seein' Things at Night"
Taking man's night vision as a standard for purposes of comparison, it has been found that a lion is slightly better able to see at night, a bear still better equipped for night vision, while an owl is the best equipped of all. Closely rivaling the latter are two representatives of the cat tribe, the tiger and the ordinary domestic cat.

Perfect Exponent of Bird Love Is Linnet
There are not two more devoted little lovers to be found than a pair of linnets. "I have often looked upon acts of devotion in the birds' world, but if you want to see bird love at its best you must watch the home life of the linnet," says Oliver G. Pike, the well-known ornithologist. Almost every action that they perform at the nest speaks of happiness, and you could not find any birds more attached to their young. If enemies approach, and they are surrounded, the hen will fall to the ground, showing the greatest bravery, and by feigning a broken wing or leg will drag herself along, keeping dangerously near the cat or weasel, until she has attracted it far from the nest. While she is bravely doing her duty the male will stand by the young, covering them with his wings until his mate returns. But when at last the young are able to fly they are led from the nest, and they never return to it again. The beautifully made home is deserted, and three weeks later the parents prepare to rear another family in a new nest.

Biblical Manuscript
So far as is known, there are no original Bible manuscripts in existence. According to the national museum, the Codex Vaticanus, so called because it is preserved at the Vatican, is the oldest Biblical manuscript now known. It is written in Greek and was probably the work of two or three scribes during the Fourth century. The manuscript contains the Old and New Testaments, although it is not complete. It is probably the most valuable treasure in the Vatican library.

DISCOVER FAMILY OF EAGLES NEAR AKRON

Birds Believed To Have Been Buzzards, Identified When One Breaks Wing.

Akron, Dec. 2.—The American bald eagle, whose likeness is the official emblem of the United States, may not become extinct, it is believed following the discovery of a family of the birds in an aerie near here.

For several years, inhabitants in the vicinity of Kent, where the waterworks for Akron is located, have noticed a flock of enormous birds, soaring in the skies. These were thought to have been species of buzzard.

But recently one of the young birds tumbled with a broken wing and an examination revealed that it was an American bald eagle. Further investigation developed that the entire family is of that species.

The Kent district is a natural sanctuary for wild birds hence little curiosity was aroused when the "buzzards" were seen. Queer waterfowl, such as loons, herons and cranes, often have been seen there. Hunting is prohibited.

But now that the "buzzards" have been identified as the almost extinct bald eagles, efforts will be made here to encourage development of the aerie.

The Kent aerie is one of the few known in the United States and promises to become a mecca for students of bird life.

SPRING WHEAT

Is Not Well Adapted To Ohio Climate.

"Would you advise me to sow spring wheat next spring on land that was not seeded this fall on account of wet weather? If so, what varieties will give best results in Ohio?"

In answering these questions, which are typical of many now being received at the Ohio Experiment Station, L. E. Thatcher, associate agronomist, says, "Spring wheat is not well adapted to Ohio climate and will not on the average equal oats or barley in yield."

"The yields in tests at Wooster have varied from 33 bushels per acre in 1918 to a complete failure in 1919. Only four years in thirteen did the yields exceed 20 bushels per acre for the best variety."

"The Blue Ribbon variety has given the best yields of the spring wheats on the several experiment farms in northern Ohio. Oats and barley on these farms have yielded 40 to 50 per cent more grain per acre than spring wheat."

To farmers who wish to give spring wheat a trial rather than expand their acreage of oats or barley, Mr. Thatcher recommends the Blue Ribbon and Marquis varieties. Seed of these varieties may be received from most seedmen. "Ohio farmers should avoid the durum or macaroni wheat, of which Kibanka, Mindum, and Acme are examples."

"Spring wheat should be seeded in the spring as soon as a good seed bed can be prepared. It requires 6 or 8 pecks per acre in Ohio, or double the amount sowed in the Northwest.

"Liberal fertilization will improve the quality as well as increase the yield. Spring wheat will be ready to harvest at about the same time as medium oats."

ASK REMOVAL OF VILLAGE MAYOR

Georgetown, O., Dec. 2.—Charges against Mayor J. W. Kibler of Mount Orab, near here, said to be the outgrowth of the indictment of four dry raiders operating out of his "kangaroo" court, were on file in common pleas court in the form of a bill of complaint here today.

The bill, which is signed by 70 voters of the nearby village, demands immediate suspension, and later complete removal from office of the mayor.

The charges set forth allegations that Mayor Kibler abused and interfered with Town Marshal David McKee, and that he permitted certain dry agents to swear out warrants for the arrest of two women on liquor law violation charges, and that the raiders attacked the two women instead of following their line of duty.

He Understood

An English employer has ordered the following notice to be posted in his business premises: "Any male employee desiring to attend the funeral of a near relative must notify his foreman before 10 a. m. on the day of the match."—Cork Examiner.

Fir Tree Swallowed

by Stronger Kindred

A correspondent of the Scientific American Magazine tells of a fir tree that swallowed another, that was brought into the sawmill at Springfield, Ore.

Not long ago a butt fir log nearly four feet in diameter was brought into the sawmill of the Booth-Kelly Lumber company, Springfield, Ore. During the process of sawing it was discovered that here was a tree that had evidently swallowed another one. Counting the growth rings, the larger outside tree was estimated to be 215 years old and the little inner one, 15 inches in diameter, 110 years old, at the time of cutting.

When and how the swallowing process took place is a matter of conjecture, but no doubt the two trees originally stood closely side by side, and in the course of growing came to press against one another to such an extent that they gradually became one. When the two trees first touched, both were young, the larger not much over 50 years old and the smaller around 35. The larger and more powerful slowly enfolded the smaller until it died from want of sun and air, after a struggle of many years' duration. Then the larger tree, evidently satisfied with its victory, kept on growing until the woodmen's axes laid it low about 75 years later.

Weeds or Flowers in Storage for Memory?

We possess many treasures that no longer have an existence anywhere but in our memories. The little by-path with its tangle of wild roses has changed to a paved street, the old home has given place to a shop with glaring front, the little group that used to gather at the piano could gather nowhere on earth now, but they are still ours.

Few of us prize as we should God's great gift of memory, or realize what a means of enrichment it is intended to be. Whether we will or not, we are continually storing it with supplies for our future. We may gather weeds or flowers, beauty or ugliness, and what we choose will determine what our memories shall hold in store. Every happy hour leaves its picture, every unworthy deed its blot. Is it not worth while to think of this in our crowded days, and choose what we will carry forward with us into the years ahead?—Montreal Family Herald.

Famous Hawaiian Dishes

The trouble with serving the Hawaiian national dishes—poi and lomilomi salmon—in other parts of the world is that few persons born outside the Hawaiian Islands like poi.

Poi, however, is the Hawaiian staff of life. Everything the old-time Hawaiians eat is served as a side dish to poi. It is a gray, paste-like material, made by pounding the root of the taro plant. It is eaten with the fingers, and choice determines its thickness. It may be of one finger or three finger consistency.

The preparation of lomilomi salmon is simple. Uncooked salt salmon is picked into small bits. Chopped tomatoes and onions are added.

By no means are poi and lomilomi salmon mixed. It is culinary sacrilege in Hawaii to take poi other than straight.

Rigid Law of Life

The law of life, Herbert Spencer, tells us, is to conform to our environment. But Jesus gives us the law of our environment, to which we must conform. Act as ye would have all men act, and you shall have abundant life. This is the law!

A certain manufacturer operated his factory in conformity to this law, and was astonished at his immediate prosperity. Not only was the quantity and quality of the product greatly improved, but the spirit of brotherly kindness permeated the whole establishment until mechanical organization gave way to living organism. The world is chaotic, nation against nation, employer against employee, rich against poor, because we are not co-operating. "Just the art of being kind is all the old world needs."—Rev. D. Raymond Taggart.

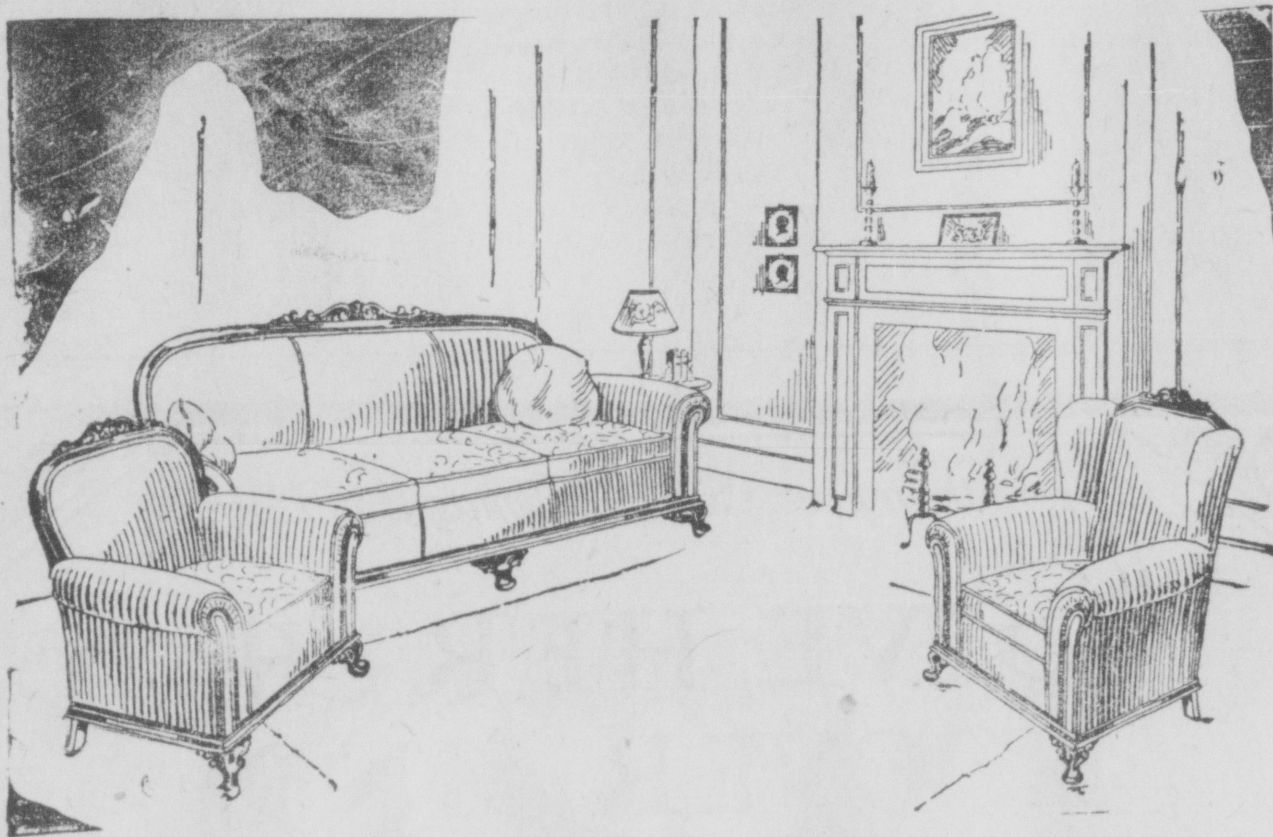

Odd Fire Escape

Devices for human safety always have been favorites with inventors. Back in the seventies when buildings were growing taller, ingenious minds turned freely to the invention of new-fangled fire escapes.

One of the oddest of these, says Popular Science Monthly, was in the form of a parachute attached to a headgear worn by the escaper. With this, declared the inventor, "a person may safely jump out of the window of a burning building from any height, and land, without injury and without the least danger, on the ground." To make doubly sure of such a landing, he further provided overshoes with thick rubber soles "to take up the concussion with the ground."

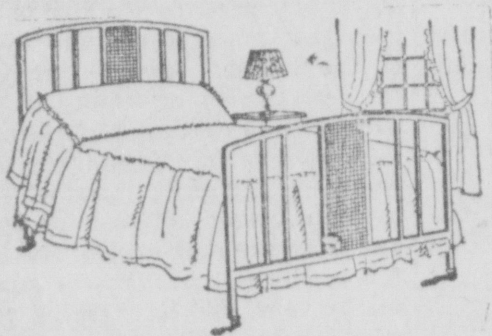

Travel Far for Ochre

Natives of Australia frequently travel several hundred miles afoot to obtain red ochre, which they use solely as paint for their bodies. This substance is obtained from small caves in the big Wongoon mountains, Muller district of west Australia, says the Sydney Bulletin. Trips are made on foot rather than on horses because if members of other tribes learn that a native is carrying the highly prized ochre the messenger stands small chance of surviving his trip.

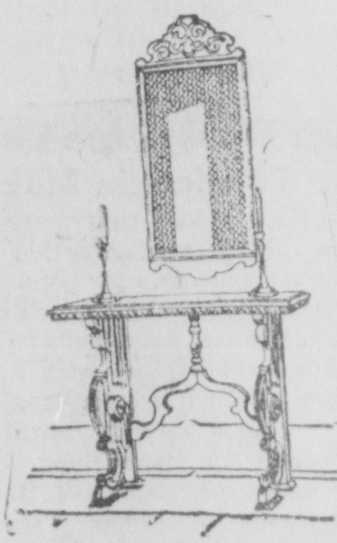

Will Your Hearthside Gleam With Christmas Cheer?

A ruddy fire, a tinsel tree, soft glowing candles, sprigs of holly and mistletoe—of such is Christmas made. But they are only the outward signs of joy. They cannot be the making of it. Real happiness comes from the manifest love of family and friends and from comfort in the home. Christmas is the time when kindred spirits assemble and Home is the meeting place. Is yours in welcoming condition? Will you be proud of it when your guests arrive? Ease and luxury depend on appearance as well as comfort. Shabbiness detracts from happiness and that feeling of well-being that belongs to the holidays. Don't let it ruin your Christmas cheer; it probably can be easily remedied. Let Santa plan to cozy up every cranny and nook that yours may be a Christmas home. Better see him about it right away.

If the arrival of holiday guests makes the purchase of a new bed a necessity, an inexpensive way out is to buy one of metal. They have all the appearance of grained wood, and are as durable as any bed made. They come in single or double sizes, in a variety of patterns.

Your Home Should Come First

First impressions are often lasting. That's why hallways should be faultlessly attired. However, first glances aren't all they receive for they're the spots where lingering callers take their farewells. A table just large enough for candles—and cards, topped by a gleaming, graceful mirror is what the hallway most depends upon for its impression.

U. S. IS OVER- CROWDED BY CON- CERT MUSICIANS

Schools and Conservatories Turn Out Countless Artists Who Make Failures.

New York, Dec. 2.—America is becoming overcrowded with concert musicians, in the belief of two authorities.

The schools and conservatories are turning out singers and instrumentalists who pass into oblivion after their debut, says Walter Damrosch, conductor of the New York symphony orchestra.

John T. Adams, a concert manager, says that of some 800 musical debuts which take place in New York each season, not more than 50 have a future, except possibly teaching.

"The opportunities for would-be opera singers and orchestra musicians are limited in this country," Damrosch says. "Finding concert precarious, the musicians become teachers and turn out more singers and instrumentalists to crowd the field."

The only likelihood of a wide concert field, Adams suggested, is in the awakening of musical interest in the cities now avoided by the prominent artists.

Gentleman of the Old School

By H. IRVING KING

MR. DILLINGHAM could not exactly be said to be "in business"; but he had large interests—mostly inherited—over which he kept a close supervision. Also a stenographer-secretary and an only son—each about twenty-five years of age.

Now you think that Walter is going to fall in love with Cynthia, that Curtis is going to object violently, there is going to be a row and the lovers are going to be married in spite of everything and everybody. Just hold your horses a minute and see. Come with me to one of those "English-basement, brownstone fronts" on West Thirty-Something street. A similar house on the right has a restaurant in the basement, a "Modiste" on the first floor and offices representing heterogeneous enterprises from there up to the roof. The house on the left is a "rooming-house." In fact, No. 39 is the only house on the block still in the occupancy of the family which owned it and dwelt therein when people spoke of being "genteel"; and the crude and hustling seventies were trying to outdo the idle and splendid forties. Step right into the drawing room and let me introduce to you Miss Margaret Blair and Mr. Walter Dillingham.

"Margaret," Walter was saying, "I don't see any sense in waiting any longer. I have heard him speak of John Blair in such terms that I don't think he will object much to having John Blair's daughter for a daughter-in-law."

"Perhaps not," replied Margaret thoughtfully. "Yet he might think—oh, he might think a lot of things—the situation being as it is—that I had inveigled you or something like that. Anyway we must wait until the end of the year when my contract expires—and in the meantime I want you to promise me that you won't say a word on the subject to your father."

"I will not make any such fool promise," said Walter. And then they had a little tiff and then he put his arms around her and kissed her and promised that he would not say a word to his father—unless circumstances forced him to.

Margaret's father had once been wealthy, but his fortune had dwindled; and as it dwindled he and his wife had gradually withdrawn from society—and been forgotten. When Mrs. Blair died society remembered for a whole week—she had been a famous hostess in her day. When, two years later, John Blair died society remembered again, even went to the funeral, and said that "something ought to be done" for Margaret. But Margaret refused all offers of assistance, and society, having done its duty, went away and forgot her existence—which was just what she wanted society to do. John Blair had left his daughter the brownstone house in Thirty-Something street and a little, a very little money. She had to work to "piece out."

Two old servants, a man and his wife, remained with her; drawing nominal wages, it is true, but possessed of healthy appetites and wasteful ways brought over from opulent times. These had to be fed and clothed. The sensible thing for Margaret to do would have been to turn the old servants adrift, sell the house and go to live in a boarding house. But she wouldn't do it. No, she would hang on.

Walter Dillingham did not too often invade the library when his father was at work there with his pretty stenographer-secretary. But sometimes he did, and when he did he could not help looking at the young woman. For Miss Cynthia Waldron was good to look at. Several times the elder Dillingham caught his son gazing upon the secretary with a look which was most objectionable to him. Finally he one day summoned Walter into his august presence and discoursed to him concerning various matters pertaining to love, marriage and ethics. "My son," said he, "I trust you will always remember that you are a gentleman—born so. I do not like your manner toward my secretary, Miss Waldron. Strongly object to it. While Miss Waldron is in my employ—"

Walter interrupted him. "Why, father, your suspicions are cruelly unjust. I wouldn't, on any account, go—er—philandering about; because I am engaged to a most charming girl, you see."

"Engaged!" cried Mr. Dillingham. And then sternly, "To whom, pray?"

"To the daughter of your old friend, John Blair."

"Indeed," replied the father. "Little Margaret! I haven't seen her for years. I have been derelict in that matter. A child of such parents cannot but make a worthy wife. But why have you not told me before? Why have you not brought her to see me?"

"Oh, you see enough of her as it is," said Walter. "She is your secretary, Cynthia Waldron. You see, she took a fake name when she went to work; didn't want society to catch on. None of society's business, anyway."

"Hum, hum, quite right," said Curtis Dillingham, Esq. "Miss Waldron, will you step this way a minute?"

MORE EVIDENCE

Unearthed In Shadesville Murder Mystery.

Columbus, Dec. 3.—A suit of underwear and a stained piece of sheeting, found buried on the farm of Elmer C. Milligan, on the Jackson pike, west of Shadesville, are in possession of Detective James Creedon and Deputy Henry Kéely, believed to be a clue to the solution of the mystery surrounding the murder of a man whose body was found in the Scioto river back-water at London pike and Bunns lane November 7.

The investigators visited the farm, late Thursday, when Milligan called, saying he had unearthed something which might be of importance. His farm is located three-quarters of a mile from the point where the body was found.

COLLIE

Protects the Body of Master From Hogs.

Newark, Dec. 2.—When J. V. Stout, farmer living near Newark, dropped dead in his hog lot yesterday, his collie dog stood guard over his body for several hours, protecting it from the hogs.

When a neighbor passing the lot saw Stout's body lying on the ground he started to go to him but was driven away by the dog. It was only when members of the family arrived that the dog consented to allow the body to be removed.

Stout was formerly a stationary engineer and was once employed at the Granville water-works pumping station.

BOB WIGGINS

Is Recovering From a Severe Operation.

The condition of Malcolm (Bob) Wiggins, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wiggins, of this city, who is a World War veteran and who underwent a very severe operation at the National Military Hospital, Dayton, on November 22, is very encouraging to his many friends.

Bob has been critically ill for over a year, suffering from Pott's disease and the operation which he underwent necessitated the removal of part of his spine, which was diseased, and the grafting of a healthy bone. He has been a patient at the hospital since last August.

CLIFFORD JINKS

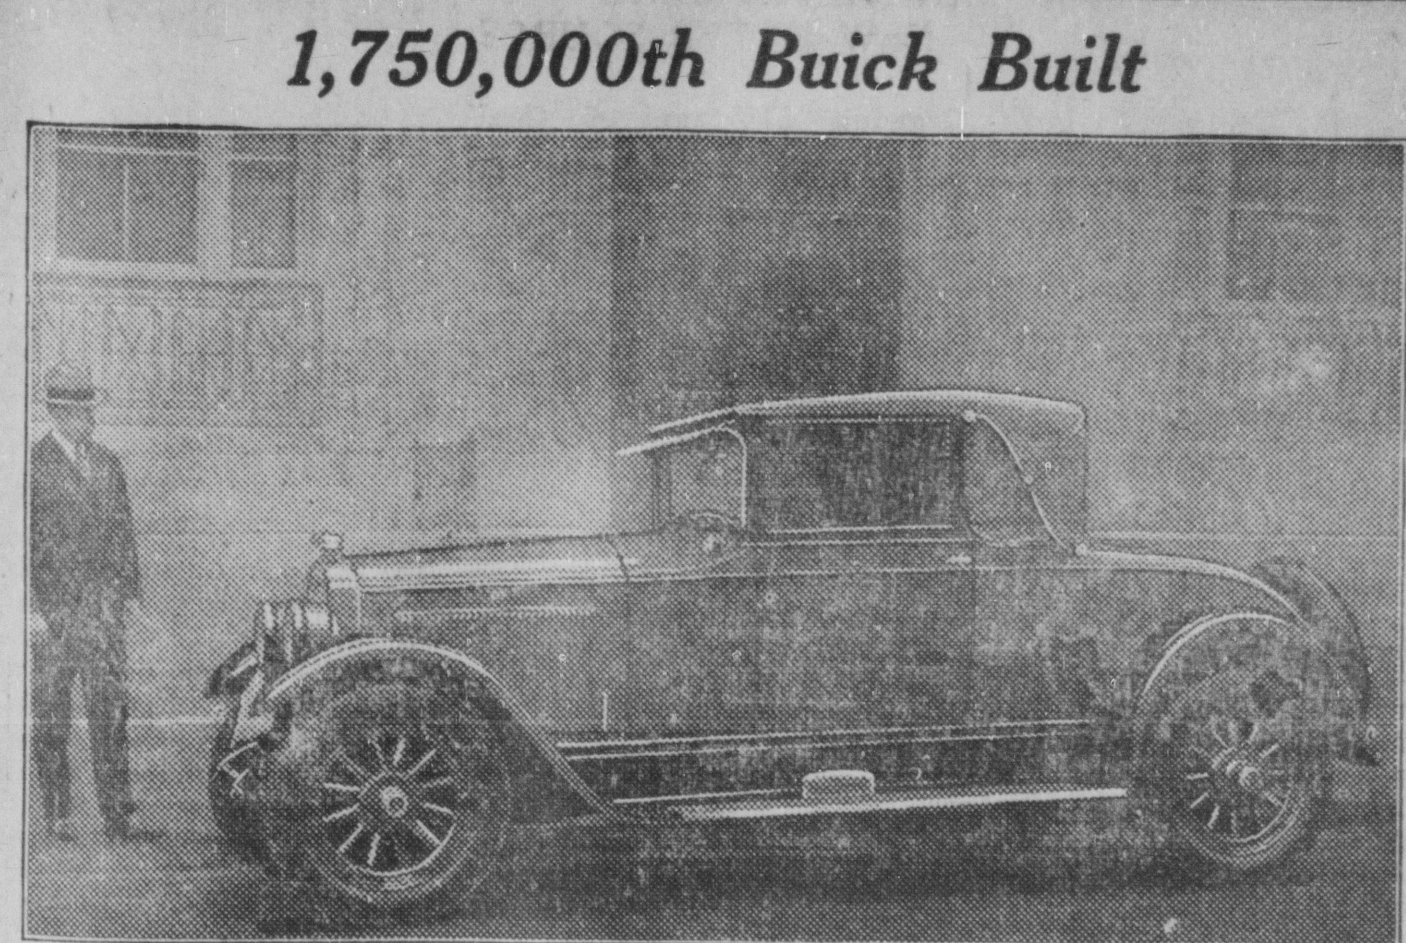

N. & W. Employee Meets With Rather Peculiar Accident.

Clifford Jinks, 19, Duvall, is in City Hospital with lacerations of the face and may lose the use of his right eye as the result of the explosion of a carbide torch he was holding while working on the N. & W. a quarter of a mile north of Duvall about 8 o'clock last night.

Jinks caught a train and came here, where he was treated by Dr. L. E. Hoyt and taken to the hospital. Dr. George S. Mytinger, who was consulted on the case, said the sight of Jinks' right eye may be recovered.—Chillicothe Gazette.

DINNER PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Warner, of Circleville township, on the Ringgold pike, entertained 18 guests to dinner Sunday, November 28; those present were, Mr. and Mrs. Ormand Bright, two children, Miss Fairy and Ormand Jr., of 1480 Mock Road, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Valentine, two daughters, Misses Mary and Hazel, Tarlton; Mr. and Mrs. George Marshall, three daughters, Misses Beatrice, Agnes and Bernice, Stoutsville; Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Stout, Ashville; Miss Emma Stout, Circleville and Mr. Elmer Helvering. The afternoon was pleasantly spent with music on piano and violins by the young ladies and Elmer Helvering and conversation by the married folks.

THE General Superintendent of the Buick Motor Company recently telephoned E. T. Strong, Former General Sales Manager, and now President and said: "At about two o'clock the one million, seven hundred and fifty thousandth Buick will be driven off the assembly line." Mr. Strong was on hand to witness this epochal event, and at four minutes of two Buick number 1,750,000 responded to the throttle and was driven away.

This demonstration of manufacturing efficiency was secondary, however, to the car which is shown above, being examined by Mr. Strong. The new Buick President has played an important part in the achievements which this car represents.

In November, 1925, Buick celebrated the building of car number 1,500,000. November 1926 marks the building of this car, number 1,750,000. Strong is justly proud of the fact that the last quarter million cars were produced within twelve months, while it took about twelve years to build the first quarter million. Of the one and three-quarter million cars built and sold, a million and a half have been delivered to consumers since Strong took up the reins as General Sales Manager of the company ten years ago.

The car pictured is the Convertible Coupe, a deluxe model on the Series 128 chassis. It is the newest Buick model, and is an example of the latest trend in body design. It is equipped with leather upholstery, a deck seat and a top which may be raised or lowered, according to the season. The windows may be placed in any position, regardless of whether the top is up or down. This model was introduced November first and will be one of the new features at the automobile shows this winter.

STREAM POLLUTION CANNERS' SUBJECT

Columbus, Dec. 2.—A discussion of the efforts made by the Ohio Cannery Association, in co-operation with the state, to prevent stream pollution, will be one of the features of the canners' convention to be held in Columbus December 7-8. The canners' organization was one of the first in Ohio to join the state in its undertaking to prevent the pollution of streams.

F. H. Waring, Columbus, chief of the Ohio State Division of Sanitary Engineers, will speak on "Progress of Sewage Disposal," and sanitary engineers will tell of the experiments made at the canning factory at Canal Winchester. All known methods of waste disposal have been tried there and much progress has been made in devising a satisfactory plan. The method to be adopted at each canning plant, however, will depend in large measure on the nature of the product canned and the location of the cannery.

Can You Answer This?

Man is not the only animal engaged in harvesting. For example, Nature Magazine asks how many of the following actually store food for future use so far as you can determine during October: Woodchucks, chipmunks, red squirrels, deer, muskrats, meadow mice, deer mice, skunks, dogs, cats, cows, horses, sheep and others?

"By and Large"

This expression has about the same meaning as comprehensively, on the whole, or everything considered. For instance, Mark Twain says in "Old Times": "Taking you by and large, you do seem to be more different kinds of an ass than any creature I ever saw before."—Pathfinder Magazine.

BRITAIN SEEKING NEW POWER SOURCE

Growing Shortage of Coal Viewed With Alarm.

London.—Alarmed at the continual dearth of coal, the British public is casting around for substitutes. Alfred J. Liversedge, a well-known engineer, sums up the possibilities of the future: Coal from China. "cheap as dirt," brought to Europe in "coal clippers" resembling the famous "tea clippers" of an earlier day. Chinese coal, he declares, is close to the surface and is easily mined by the cheapest labor in the world. The day may come when China will flood the world with coal at prices no one else can match.

The huge chalk cliffs of Great Britain may be burnt like coal, but they leave such an enormous deposit of lime of which only a trifling amount could be used for agriculture that chalk is not considered practical.

Doctor Diesel's theory that mankind might grow oil-bearing plants which could be used for fuel.

Sir Charles Parsons, Bt., famous inventor of the Parsons turbine, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science, that we might get all the heat we needed drilling a big hole into the crust of the earth; he thought 12 miles would be deep enough.

Steam from the center of the earth, such as Italy already has.

Atomic power, as envisaged by Sir Oliver Lodge. While the theory seems perfectly sound the mechanical difficulties have thus far proved insuperable.

The electric engineer, A. A. Campbell Swinton, has interested scientists with his contention that the electromagnetic waves from the sun will some day be converted into heat just as a portion of them are now being used in wireless telegraphy.

Oil—but there is very little oil in Britain.

"White coal," or waterpower. This the author regards as practicable but says that Great Britain in this respect, as in oil, cannot compete with other countries enjoying a more abundant supply.

Tides—here is the cheapest possible source of power available in the near future to Great Britain. "No other country is so fortunately situated as Great Britain in respect to tidal power; using it freely and expertly we can once again compete for the markets of the world."

MARKETING OF LUMBER DISCUSSED

Poor System of Grading Has Wasted Much Sound and Usable Timber.

Grading, piling and marketing lumber as it comes from the sawmill will be demonstrated to owners of farm woodlots and of portable and stationary sawmills.

A series of demonstrations has been arranged by F. W. Dean, extension forester at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station, for the maple and beech tree sections of northeastern and eastern Ohio. The first demonstration has been announced for December 8, near Rome, Ashtabula county.

This section is typical of the maple beech section of northeastern Ohio. Farmers and mill owners, according to Mr. Dean, will have an excellent opportunity to observe the proper method of sawing logs into graded lumber under actual mill conditions. The lumber will also be graded to its best possible advantage as it is taken from the saw.

The mill, owned and operated by the Ohio Hardwood company of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, is equipped to demonstrate all methods of sawing logs into the best quality lumber possible with a portable sawmill. An edger and cut-off saw are operated as part of the portable mill.

Proper piling for lumber at the mill will be emphasized, says Mr. Dean, along with the best marketing methods for lumber from a portable mill. A demonstrated lecture on the proper care, filing and fitting of saws is part of the program.

Poor marketing and grading of lumber from small woodlots has wasted great deal of sound usable lumber.

Petals Turn Back

A rather remarkable trait of the hibiscus, says Nature Magazine, is that often, after it has been plucked, the petals will turn back, gradually returning again to normal, several hours later. A silent protest, it would seem, against despoliation.

PICKAWAY WINS FROM ATLANTA BASKETEERS

Win Boys Game by Score of 25 to 7 and Girls are Winners by 19 to 10.

The Pickaway Cagers defeated Atlanta Friday evening by a score of 25 to 7. The game was fast from start to finish. The local fans did some splendid shooting. Alexander at forward played a real offensive and defensive game. Wright, the Cagers center did not play as good a game as he generally plays but still he made Atlanta step to keep up with him. Ross and Jury deserves much credit for playing the defensive game. They both played a wonderfully good game.

The Cagers had four men off their line-up which will probably be on for next Friday night.

DRY GOODS STORE QUILTS.

Local people and those who do their marketing in New Holland will soon begin to feel the loss of our only exclusive dry goods store, unless someone buys the business of Arthur Barthelmas, who is now in his last few days of business here.

Mr. Barthelmas, who opened the store in the former Dones location, on September 1, has decided to discontinue the store and has been selling out his stocks at cost. When he closes the doors, or turns the store over to a new owner, he will return to Moeller's Dry Goods and Carpet house, in Circleville, where he was formerly located. He will take direct charge of the rug department upon his return to that establishment.

Since coming here, the Barthelmas family have made many friends, who will regret to see their removal. They have conducted as nearly modern a store as has been possible under local conditions. Fresh, new goods, modern in every respect, and with every reasonable snap have been offered to local people, at prices that were only reasonable. The loss of such a store would be a great blow to the town as a shopping center, in these days of keen competition, and the automobile. —New Holland Leader.

FORMAL GREETINGS SOMEWHAT HOLLOW

When the President of the United States one day sends birthday congratulations to the king of swat, another day cables congratulations on the anniversary of the promulgation of their constitution to the President of whatist, and again sends congratulations to the premier of Iodine for the same reason, you can just make up your mind that somebody else in the service of our government is keeping track of all these things for him, says the Pathfinder Magazine.

Do you suppose that President Coolidge would pause in the midst of landing a big trout in the waters of the Minnetonka just to send birthday greetings to the chief of the Bozo tribe? No, the State department at Washington has a specially organized force which keeps tab on birthdays of foreign rulers and other days of rejoicing in the various countries with which we are friendly, diplomatically at least.

THE FALL-DOHENY CONSPIRACY TRIAL

PRODUCES A SENSATION ADMIRAL REFUSES TO TESTIFY

On Orders of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur—His Testimony Would Have Made Public the Secret Strategic Importance of the Pearl Harbor Fortifications in Hawaii.

The defense Friday drew Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy into the Fall-Doheny criminal conspiracy trial accusing the secretary in open court of seeking to restrict the testimony of a retired naval officer and produced what they said was an official order to prove it.

Whether or not the document is to go before the jury was still undecided when court was adjourned Friday night, but Mr. Wilbur will be put on the witness stand Monday. He declined to forecast what his testimony would be.

Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for the defense, presented the document during examination of Rear Admiral J. K. Robison, retired, former chief of the bureau of engineering, when the witness refused to answer questions concerning the strategic importance of the Pearl Harbor (Hawaii) naval base.

Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, and Edward L. Doheny, lessee of the Elks Hill reserve, are charged with criminal conspiracy to defraud the government in the negotiations which led to the lease and the award to Doheny's company of an oil storage contract at Pearl Harbor.

Admiral Robison, one of the principal defense witnesses, was called for questioning as to the part the navy took in the negotiations. As special representative of Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy at the time, he said he was charged with all negotiations involving the navy's interest and in that capacity was conversant with virtually every step in the conversations which culminated in the leases and contracts awarded to Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company.

When Hogan questioned Robison as to the official status of the Pearl Harbor base in the war plans division of the navy department, the witness refused to answer.

"Have you received any order from the navy department?" Hogan asked.

"Yes."

"Produce it."

Robison refused, but finally handed a paper to Justice Hoehling, presiding. "I see no need of publishing that," the court said.

The matter then was taken under advisement, following government objection to Hogan's tender of the document in evidence.

The Wilbur flurry was the climax of a laborious day which put before the jury evidence that both sides averred supported their case.

The cross examination of Dr. H. Foster Bain, former director of the Bureau of Mines, was directed by the prosecution to an effort to establish its contention that Fall personally supervised the details of the Elk Hills and Pearl Harbor negotiations.

The direct examination of Admiral Robison and three other defense witnesses was viewed by the defense as having supported their contention that the navy department's close watch of the negotiations made collusion between Fall and Doheny impossible.

Admiral Robison said he was acquainted with every detail of the negotiations and that the interior department subordinates did nothing without consulting him. He, in turn, presented all-important questions to Secretary Denby for his personal consideration and approval.

Denby approved Robison's decision to assent to the interior department's proposal to open the Elk Hills reserve to additional leasing, the witness said. He also personally approved the Pearl Harbor contract and ordered Robison to proceed with the navy's part in its immediate execution.

A detailed map of Pearl Harbor and contiguous territory was spread before the jury in the examination of Rear Admiral Gregory, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, who was called for examination as to the importance of the $100,000,000 naval base to the Pacific fleet. He identified departmental memoranda which culminated in formal acquiescence by Secretary Denby to the interior department's plans for handling naval oil.

Admiral Robison testified later he understood the plans had originated not with Fall, but in the offices of petroleum technologists of the bureau of mines.

RINGLING, VETERAN CIRCUS MAN, IS DEAD

Charles Ringling, circus man financier and railroad builder, died at his home at Sarasota, Florida, at 7 o'clock Friday night after an illness of several weeks. His death was unexpected as it had been believed by attending physicians as late as Friday that he was recovering from an attack of heart trouble.

Mr. Ringling was one of the famous Ringling brothers who years ago organized a wagon show and from this developed the largest circus organization in the world, making their names household words.

AGED NEGRO NOT GUILTY

Athens—Joe Wood, aged negro, was found not guilty of the murder of Edgar Mariner, dry raider, by a jury Friday afternoon. The jury returned its verdict shortly after 2 o'clock after deliberating for nearly four hours. Wood claimed that he shot the enforcement officer when the raiders came to his shanty late at night and he mistook them for highwaymen.

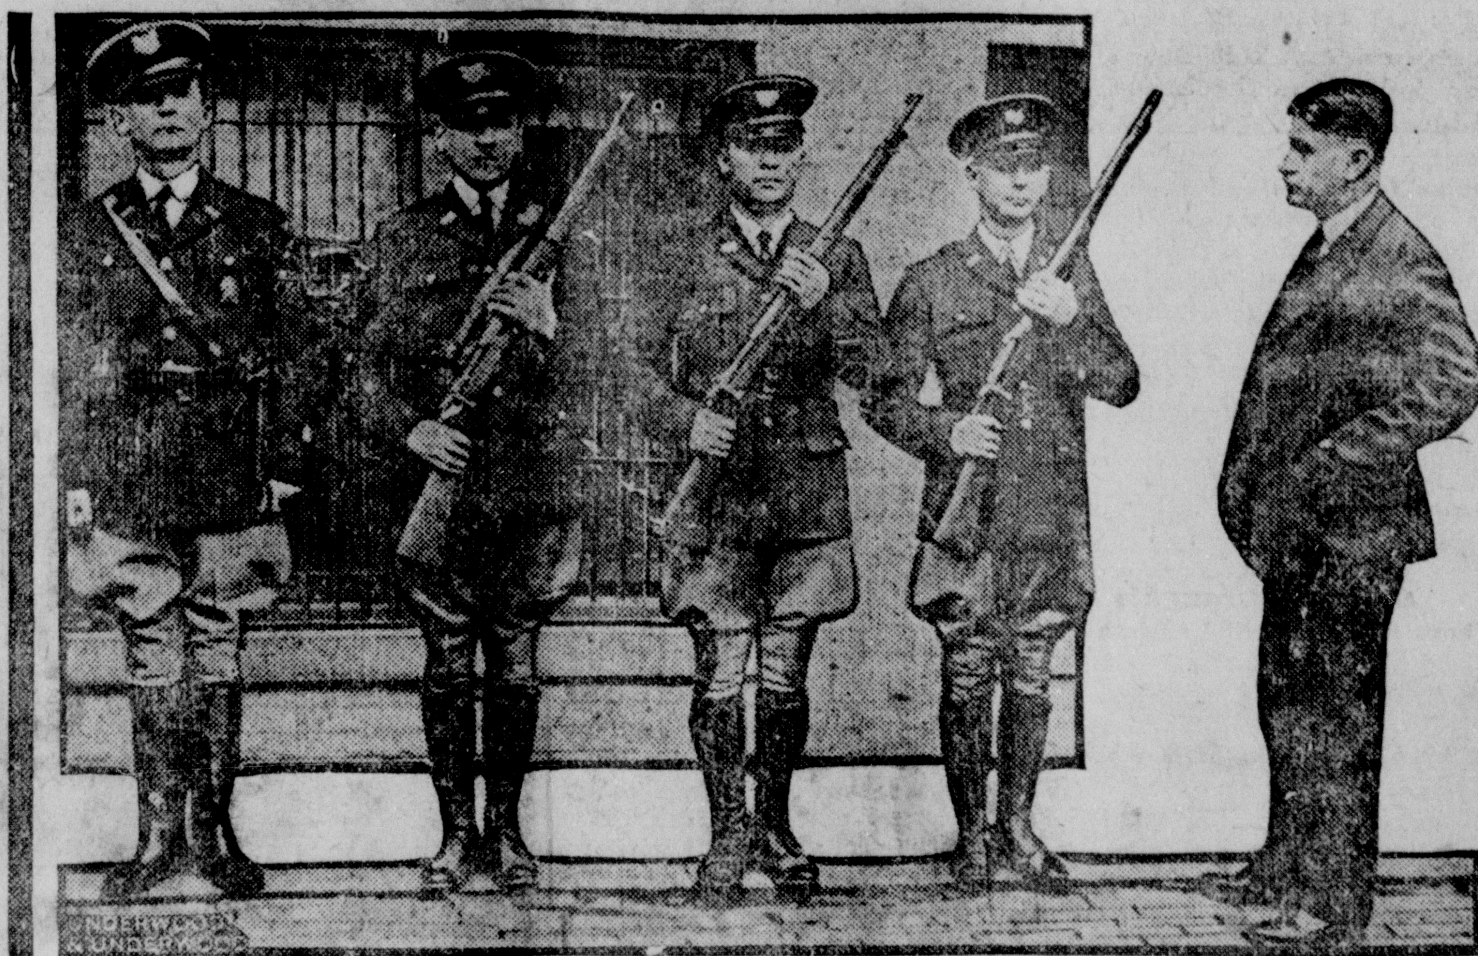

FIRE FRIDAY NIGHT.

The fire department was called to the sheriff's residence Friday evening at 10:30 o'clock. An awning on the west side of the building caught fire and was consumed.

Last week a blacksmith was paralyzed by a kick on the knee from a sharp-spurred old rooster. We always did look upon blacksmithing as a dangerous occupation.

Stealing chickens would not be such a serious piece of business if there weren't so much fun poked at it.

New Jersey Dry Agents Put in Uniform

Dry agents operating in the state of New Jersey will hereafter wear uniforms when going out to raid a "joint," at least one member of the raiding party being so dressed, so that the violators of the law will know that a real raid is being staged and that they are not encountering hangers-on. Photograph shows four agents wearing their new uniforms, being inspected by Col. Ira L. Reeves.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus — C. B. Beatty, East Liverpool, pottery jobber and gubernatorial aspirant, twice in the last three years refused to be discouraged merely because the electors of Ohio have twice failed to nominate here. At each primary election, Beatty has been badly defeated, receiving only 8797 votes at the last primary.

Despite this Beatty has already telegraphed Secretary of State Brown asking the latter to mail him blanks so that he can file as a candidate in 1928.

Dayton — After nine hours of deliberation a jury returned a verdict finding Albert L. Hill, 48, guilty of murder in the first degree, but recommended mercy, which is equivalent to a life sentence in the penitentiary at Columbus.

Cardington — Robert A. Beatty, a member of the state constitutional convention in 1912, died at his home here. He had been ill for several weeks.

Columbus — Lieutenant Colonel L. Harry Davis, attorney, Pomeroy, has been selected as first assistant attorney general by Edward C. Turner, attorney general-elect. Davis will take office January 10. He was graduated from the Ohio State university college in law in 1914, and was admitted to the bar the same year.

Columbus — An investigation of the recent break of the Ohio and United States crop reporting service would be welcomed, state director of agriculture Truax told Myers Y. Cooper in a letter. This statement was an answer to Cooper's assertion that an investigation of the next should be made.

Columbus — "Miners should not be permitted to strike" and when the Jacksonville agreement expires operation should be on an open shop basis or the miners accept a wage reduction, the report of the coal committee of the Ohio chamber of commerce announced here today said.

King George has recently been seen in public with his trousers creased down the front instead of down the side, the style he previously followed. The question is, does that mean war between England and France?

AUTOMOBILE GETS FARMER FRESH MEATS

Retail Dealers Will Probably Butcher Less and Less in the Next Few Years.

Automobiles have increased the farmer's demand for fresh meats from the local retail butcher, according to George F. Henning, of the department of rural economics at the Ohio State university, who has just completed a study of the channels thru which livestock from Ohio farms reaches the markets.

Local demands on round steak in a few instances caused the price to go up until it equaled the more choice cuts, porterhouse and sirloin. This, it is thought, may in part be due to the consumer's aversion to bone in his meat.

Local retailers that kill all their own meat are also becoming fewer. Many times communities that form the local trade will demand more of the hind quarters than the forequarters. This leaves the butcher who kills his own meat with a surplus of other cuts. Packers will wholesale the desired or most saleable parts as they are needed. Many of them are also offering good service by truck to the retailer's store.

Retailers are finding difficulty in securing a uniform grade of animals in their local communities when they want them. By buying from packers the butcher is able to get the exact grade of meat his trade desires. It seems to be the opinion of many local butchers, Mr. Henning says, that the butcher shop will kill less of its own meat in the next few years.

BRIEFLY TOLD

—Stanley Stevenson has leased the old home of the late H. R. Heffner, now owned by the Trinity Lutheran church and will move his family from Columbus to this city. Mr. Stevenson is the chief engineer for the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company.

A diplomat is a man who can make his wife feel that he is doing her a favor when he accepts part of the week's wages he turned over to her the night before.

A letter of recommendation is an effort to pay an obligation to a second person at the expense of a third.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS

The Chesapeake & Hocking railroad has a number of rails laid north from the Lindsey farm on its right-of-way.

A water line has been laid from the canning company's supply tank to the Bates & Rodgers camp established in the Longbaugh shop building near the power house and is now about ready for occupancy.

About 80 mules and horses arrived at the N. & W., stock yards in Ashville on Wednesday afternoon. These animals are the property of Ferguson & Edmonson and were taken to the camp at Gray north of Ashville, Thanksgiving day. The stock is of high grade and in splendid condition for service.—Ashville News.

GETS PERKINS MEDAL

Dr. John E. Teeple, New York city chemist, has been awarded the Perkins medal for 1927 for his achievements in chemistry, particularly the development of an American potash industry at Searles Lake, Calif. He is secretary of the American Chemical society, a native of Illinois, and a graduate of Valparaiso college and Cornell university.

LADIES' SOCIETY.

The last meeting in 1926, of the Ladies' society of Trinity Lutheran congregation, was held Wednesday afternoon in the social rooms of the church, 86 members and a number of visitors were present and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. The missionary paper for the month was read by Mrs. W. E. Crist, subject: "Our Home Mission Union." After transaction of business, a social hour followed, during which Mrs. Frank Kline Jr., sang the beautiful solo: "The Silent Voice." The December committee served a delicious lunch, pressed chicken, mashed potatoes with gravy and cranberries, spiced pears, coffee and buttered rolls.

MURDER IS SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY

Mystery surrounds the identity of a man who apparently had been slugged and tossed onto a coal pile in the basement of the Wells Auto Service company 555 East Main street, Columbus.

The man was found lying on the coal pile, a wound in his head, at 5 o'clock Wednesday by B. F. Howell, 523 East Cherry street, night watchman, when he went to the basement to fire the furnace. He was in a semi-conscious condition and was revived by Mr. Howell.

The stanger, seemingly, was unaware of his identity, or did not care to divulge it, as he left the basement in a short time after returning to consciousness, made his way to the street and disappeared before Mr. Howell could question him further.

Theory is that the man had been slugged, his pockets turned out and then shoved thru the coal hole from the street.

An Ohio editor notifies his readers that there is no use sending him anonymous letters, as he never opens them.

A tip is a bit of money you give to a waiter for doing something you do not want done and which he doesn't do.

A Double Dose

"Autumn is the saddest time of the year. I wonder why?"
"Possibly it's because you get coal and ice bills at the same time."

Youthful Rider in Luck

A pony ridden by Ray Shoaf, thirteen, was killed by electricity at New Castle, Pa., but the boy escaped injury. As he rode by a pole, the youngster says, his pony fell and he jumped off. He went to get help, thinking that the pony had tripped, but the men who went to assist found that the body of the pony was charged with electricity. It is believed that the saddle and the boy's rubber-soled shoes acted as insulators and saved him from death.

Crepe Street Frocks Are Partial to Plaits

While fashion demands greater softness and fullness in spring frocks, it continues to approve the slim silhouette. Modistes, by means of crepe and plaits, continue to follow fashion without destroying the appearance of slenderness—they dissemble fullness with flat plaits.

Two-Piece Jumper Frock Is in Fashion Limelight

In a single collection of new models there were included no less than 20 different versions of the two-piece jumper frock. Some were fashioned of the new soft woolsens in kasha weaves. Others were of knitted fabrics. A third type emphasized the vogue of rough textured silks such as shantung and rajah, while for evening one found these charmingly youthful little frocks developed in crepes and chiffons.

Standing out with significant definiteness in any array of new fashions are the frocks of the two-piece type made entirely by hand and with characteristic French touches in the cunning details of hand work in the form of fine hemstitching, tucking or delicate embroidery.

In Paris there is one particular house noted for the smartness of its little silk sport frocks. These are tailored with all the care and precision that goes into the making of more formal costumes, and they are delightful examples of simple fashions in their most perfect guise.

Fashions That Persist to Hold Milady's Favor

From the fashion point of view, this season holds much of interest. Spring modes are introduced and tried out and from the outstanding successes of the previous season one or two remain. With slight modification and changes they continue on their way.

A mode that shows no sign of becoming passe is the dinner and dance frock of delicate transparent fabrics. These in various new interpretations are shown in increasing numbers each week. From the resorts of the South where fashions for the present and future are established comes word that in almost any assemblage of smart women the sheer dance frock in pastel shades outnumbers those of any other fabric.

One of the colors that promises to continue its present vogue throughout the late spring and summer is a soft tone of pink almost faded in hue.

It is intensely becoming to both young and old and has a certain elusive charm difficult to put into words.

Sailor Collar Appears With or Without Shield

The sailor collar appears in regulation form, sometimes with and sometimes without a shield. Its tie varies from the wide to the narrow and may be bowed or knotted. In the back it reaches from shoulder to shoulder and squares itself in the old familiar way. In the jumper dress the sailor collar creates a neck finish refreshingly different. It lacks the convertible feature, of course, that so many jumper necks possess. A contrasting border and tie in solid color or print gives emphasis to the sailor shape and dimensions. This collar is equally applicable to the one-piece frock of sport or semi-sport type.

Jumper to Jumper

When a fashionable woman today changes her dress she just goes from jumper to jumper. So universal has the mode for jumpers become that they are developed in jersey for sports, in silk, velvet or mousseline for afternoon wear and in lace, embroidery or lame for evening. The evening jumpers considered the smartest at the moment are those covered with sequins.

Boleros Advanced

The bolero jacket has been promoted from the daytime frock to evening wear. The short, round little jackets now are made in lace or beaded or spangled silk for wear over evening dresses. Usually they are of a shade contrasting with the frocks, of which the bodies are straight and close fitting.

Chiffon Lisle Stockings

Chiffon lisle stockings are replacing heavier woolen ones for sports wear. It is said that they are quite warm enough and that they are more attractive on the leg than heavier woolsens. Soft, pastel shades are those generally chosen.

Cops to Carry Cameras

Cincinnati policemen will be equipped with cameras in addition to night sticks. It is thought that cameras will provide a useful adjunct in accident cases, as the officer will be able to take a picture of the actual accident and many disputes by witnesses will be avoided.

Many Big League StarsAre on Football Teams

A surprising number of big league baseball players also play professional football, and virtually all of them learned the two games while students at colleges in various parts of the country.

French, of the Philadelphia Athletics, is one of them. As soon as the American league season closes this former all-American fullback joins one or another of the professional gridiron teams and cleans up another neat little sum of money.

Ernie Vick, of the St. Louis Cardinals, is with the Chicago Bears, while, Gob Buckeye, big Cleveland pitcher, is with Joe Sternaman's crack gridiron outfit.

Bob Fitzke, who had tryouts with a couple of major league teams, has been a star backfield man on big professional elevens since leaving the University of Idaho, where he won a big reputation.

There are any number of other players in organized baseball who have year-round incomes by taking to the gridiron and basket-ball court during the months when the national pastime cannot be played.

FIGHTERS OF PRESENT DAY FULL OF TALK

Boxers Now Will Not Scrap
Hard Enough to Learn Their Trade.

Twenty years ago there were twenty great fighters to every one of today's, declares "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, who in his day swapped punches with the best of them. Hugh Fulerton, writing in this week's Liberty about O'Brien, tells how he asked the former prizefighter what he thought was responsible for the inferiority of modern pugilists. "It is because today fighters will not practice the sacrifices necessary to gain success in their chosen profession," O'Brien replied.

"You needn't limit that statement to boxing," O'Brien went on. "It goes for a lot of other businesses, too. Th-men today haven't the co-ordination, haven't the ambition and they will not study the way we were forced to do; nor will they fight hard enough to learn their own trade.

"There are as good men today, and the modern boxer has better chances and better training. And yet, for all that, the quality of fighters has gone down steadily. In the old days, fellows went into the game because they liked to fight—and they fought often enough to learn how. Beside:
that, a fellow had to know how to fight to save his block being knocked loose. Nowadays it is a business."

Use Airplane to ReforestBurned Area in Hawaii

Honolulu, Hawaii.—New practical uses for airplanes appear on the horizon every day. This time a plane has been pressed into service to help reforest a burned-over area of several hundred acres in a forest preserve near here.

About 700 pounds of forest tree seeds were sown by airplane in less than an hour over rocky inaccessible country devastated by recent forest fires that would have required an immense amount of time and labor if done by hand, according to reports from the forestry section of the territory of Hawaii.

The aerial sowing was of especial value, say forestry experts, in getting the burned-over area seeded quickly so the young seedlings would have a start ahead of the undesirable weeds and ferns that spring up nearly overnight in the tropics. Seeds scattered were from 40 different kinds of trees, natives of India, Africa, Australia and other tropical countries.

BRITAIN SEEKING NEW POWER SOURCE

Growing Shortage of Coal Viewed With Alarm.

London.—Alarmed at the continual dearth of coal, the British public is casting around for substitutes. Alfred J. Liversedge, a well-known engineer, sums up the possibilities of the future: Coal from China, "cheap as dirt," brought to Europe in "coal clippers" resembling the famous "tea clippers" of an earlier day. Chinese coal, he declares, is close to the surface and is easily mined by the cheapest labor in the world. The day may come when China will flood the world with coal at prices no one else can match.

The huge chalk cliffs of Great Britain may be burnt like coal, but they leave such an enormous deposit of lime of which only a trifling amount could be used for agriculture that chalk is not considered practical.

Doctor Diesel's theory that mankind might grow oil-bearing plants which could be used for fuel.

Sir Charles Parsons, Bt., famous inventor of the Parsons turbine, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science, that we might get all the heat we needed drilling a big hole into the crust of the earth; he thought 12 miles would be deep enough.

Steam from the center of the earth, such as Italy already has.

Atomic power, as envisaged by Sir Oliver Lodge. While the theory seems perfectly sound the mechanical difficulties have thus far proved insuperable.

The electric engineer, A. A. Campbell Swinton, has interested scientists with his contention that the electromagnetic waves from the sun will some day be converted into heat just as a portion of them are now being used in wireless telegraphy.

Oil—but there is very little oil in Britain.

"White coal," or waterpower. This the author regards as practicable but says that Great Britain in this respect, as in oil, cannot compete with other countries enjoying a more abundant supply.

Tides—here is the cheapest possible source of power available in the near future to Great Britain. "No other country is so fortunately situated as Great Britain in respect to tidal power; using it freely and expertly we can once again compete for the markets of the world."

MARKETING OF LUMBER DISCUSSED

Grading, piling and marketing lumber as it comes from the sawmill will be demonstrated to owners of farm woodlots and of portable and stationary sawmills.

A series of demonstrations has been arranged by F. W. Dean, extension forester at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station, for the maple and beech tree sections of northeastern and eastern Ohio. The first demonstration has been announced for December 8, near Rome, Ashtabula county.

This section is typical of the maple beech section of northeastern Ohio. Farmers and mill owners, according to Mr. Dean, will have an excellent opportunity to observe the proper method of sawing logs into graded lumber under actual mill conditions. The lumber will also be graded to its best possible advantage as it is taken from the saw.

The mill, owned and operated by the Ohio Hardwood company of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, is equipped to demonstrate all methods of sawing logs into the best quality lumber possible with a portable sawmill. An edger and cut-off saw are operated as part of the portable mill.

Proper piling for lumber at the mill will be emphasized, says Mr. Dean, along with the best marketing methods for lumber from a portable mill. A demonstrated lecture on the proper care, filing and fitting of saws is part of the program.

Poor marketing and grading of lumber from small woodlots has wasted a great deal of sound usable lumber.

Petals Turn Back
A rather remarkable trait of the hibiscus, says Nature Magazine, is that often, after it has been plucked, the petals will turn back, gradually returning again to normal, several hours later. A silent protest, it would seem, against despoliation.

Introduce Themselves
It is not so hard to distinguish the alumnus of the School of Experience. When the zealot has explained his scheme for saving the world, they ask "Why?"—Detroit News.

PICKAWAY WINS FROM ATLANTA BASKETEERS

Win Boys Game by Score of 25 to 7 and Girls are Winners by 19 to 10.

The Pickaway Cagers defeated Atlanta Friday evening by a score of 25 to 7. The game was fast from start to finish. The local fans did some splendid shooting. Alexander at forward played a real offensive and defensive game. Wright, the Cagers center did not play as good a game as he generally plays but still he made Atlanta step to keep up with him. Ross and Jury deserves much credit for playing the defensive game. They both played a wonderfully good game.

The Cagers had four men off their line-up which will probably be on for next Friday night.

The Pickaway girls played one of the best games so far this season. At forwards Conaway made the points with Rader, Bitzer and Anderson to get her the ball. All the offensive players deserve much credit in winning this game.

The local girls held the visitors to ten points. They all played a splendid game. H. Anderson, Hampshire Dumm and McKenzie are the local guards that will hold any team to a few points.

Pickaway plays New Holland next Friday night, December 10. Come and see this game which is promising to be a good one.

DRY GOODS STORE QUITS.

Local people and those who do their marketing in New Holland will soon begin to feel the loss of our only exclusive dry goods store, unless someone buys the business of Arthur Barthelmas, who is now in his last few days of business here.

Mr. Barthelmas, who opened the store in the former Dones location, on September 1, has decided to discontinue the store and has been selling out his stocks at cost. When he closes the doors, or turns the store over to a new owner, he will return to Moeller's Dry Goods and Carpet house, in Circleville, where he was formerly located. He will take direct charge of the rug department upon his return to that establishment.

Since coming here, the Barthelmas family have made many friends, who will regret to see their removal. They have conducted as nearly modern a store as has been possible under local conditions. Fresh, new goods, modern in every respect, and with every reasonable snap have been offered to local people, at prices that were only reasonable. The loss of such a store would be a great blow to the town as a shopping center, in these days of keen competition, and the automobile.

—New Holland Leader.

The Purist

A pair of owls came down the chimney into the sitting room of a Kent schoolmaster. We understand that they exasperated him by repeatedly saying, "To who?" instead of "To whom?"—London Opinion.

FORMAL GREETINGS SOMEWHAT HOLLOW

When the President of the United States one day sends birthday congratulations to the king of swat, another day cables congratulations on the anniversary of the promulgation of their constitution to the President of what is, and again sends congratulations to the premier of iodine for the same reason, you can just make up your mind that somebody else in the service of our government is keeping track of all these things for him, says the Pathfinder Magazine.

Do you suppose that President Coolidge would pause in the midst of landing a big trout in the waters of the Mianetonga just to send birthday greetings to the chief of the Bozo tribe? No, the State department at Washington has a specially organized force which keeps tab on birthdays of foreign rulers and other days of rejoicing in the various countries with which we are friendly, diplomatically at least.
